

Workshop: Empirical and theoretical perspectives on green growth and climate change

26-28 April, 2021

Online, via the Institute for Futures Studies, Stockholm

Organizers: Paul Bowman (IFFS) and Malcolm Fairbrother (Umeå and IFFS)

This workshop is part of the Climate Ethics and FutureGenerations research program (PI Gustaf Arrhenius, co-PIs Krister Bykvist and Göran Duus-Otterström). Funding for both the workshop and the research program is generously provided by Riksbankens Jubileumsfond (the Swedish Foundation for Humanities and Social Sciences). For more information on the Climate Ethics and Future Generations research program, visit climateethics.se.

Note: All times are Central European Summer Time, i.e., Stockholm time (Conversions: British Summer Time is 1 hour behind; Eastern Time is 6 hours behind; Pacific Time is 9 hours behind)

Day 1	Monday, 26 April
1450-15	Welcome
15-16	Malcolm Fairbrother (Umeå and IFFS), “In Search of Decoupling: What’s on the Horizon”
1610-1710	Pernilla Hagbert (KTH), “Approaching Change: Exploring Cracks in the Eco-Modern Sustainability Paradigm”
1720-1820	Taylor Davis (Purdue) “Normative Motivation and Norms of Sustainability”
Day 2	Tuesday, 27 April
15-16	Kimberly Nicholas (Lund), “Values and Costs: We Can’t Afford Not To Fix Climate Change”
1610-1710	Säde Hormio (Helsinki), “Value choices in green growth policies”
1720-1820	C. Tyler DesRoches (Arizona State), “Towards a New Theory of Consumer Well-Being”
Day 3	Wednesday, 28 April
1400-1545	Julia Steinberger (Leeds), “Is it possible to live well within planetary limits? Evidence and modeling from the LiLi project” Note: This presentation is also part of the IFFS researchseminar series
16-1700	Eric Brandstedt (Lund), “Is the Transition to a Low-Carbon Future Constrained by Justice?”
1710-1810	Katya Rhodes (Victoria) and Will Scott (Stanford), “Designing flexible regulations to mitigate climate change: A cross-country comparative policy analysis”